

FEE's Environmental Education programmes celebrate the Environmental day!

Since 1981, the Foundation for Environmental Education (FEE) promotes sustainable development through environmental education. Its three educational programmes: Eco-Schools (www.eco-schools.org), Learning about Forests (www.leaf-international.org) and Young Reporters for the Environment (www.youngreporters.org) are now developed worldwide, and raise awareness in local communities in more than 50 countries.

These programmes give the opportunity to young people to tackle environmental problems and find solutions, as well as sharing their different experiences.

The FEE educational programmes work hand in hand for a better environmental future, giving the tools to younger generations to reach their goals. Throughout environmental positively-driven activities, they engage the youth in being proactive.

Every year since 1972, the 5th of June is celebrated as the "World Environmental Day". This special day was established by the UN General Assembly to mark the opening of the Stockholm Conference on the Human Environment.

FEE's educational programmes wishes to celebrate this day with you, and to encourage you to continue working towards a sustainable future – every action counts!

Bjørn Helge Bjørnstad, Estela Gonçalves Pereira, Sophie Bachet – Leaf, Eco-Schools, and Young Reporters for the Programme International Coordinators.
For more information: www.fee-international.org